We're getting calls daily asking "Why hasn't my soil sample come in?"

Over the week end the results were received for a sample submitted February 3.

The last weather in January and early February reduced the number of samples normally submitted. The soil testing lab is now literally snowed under with samples.

The lab has the facilities for analyzing 500 samples daily or 2500 per week. There is now a three week backlog. This explains the delay you may be experiencing.

It's anticipated that after April 15 results will be returned within one week. We regret the delay but as always the larger number of samples are always received in February and March.

Most of the mercury compounds used for treating seeds will be disallowed as of March 15, 1970. Seed that have been treated will be eligible for sale this spring.

At the present time, no substitute recommendations are available.

It's time to apply weed control chemicals to the lawn and certain crops.

There are several herbicides that will control crabgrass and foxtails in lawns. One that I find that's locally available is Dacthal. It should go on now.

2,4-D will catch most broad-leaf lawn weeds. Some weeds get a little difficult and for these you'll need Silver or Dicamba.

You may want to pick up a copy of Chemical Control of Turfgrass Weeds.

* * *

If you're growing fruits and you plan to chemically control weeds the time to do it is now. Simazine does a good job around apples, peaches, pears, raspberries, and grapes. I like to use it on asparagus also.

* * *

Someone said last week that they had given up on strawberries. That they were just too much trouble. You can minimize the work with the application of a weed control chemical. If you are just setting berry plants, it's good to apply a herbicide.

Today's farmer will need to carefully match up the soil, the crop, the fertilizer, and his management.

Upland soils, for example, will give a better response to sod - planted corn that will bottom land. This isn't to say that sod planted corn shouldn't be used on all corn land, but if a choice is necessary, choose the one that gives the greatest response.

As more of the "weevil resistant" alfalfa varieties become available dairymen will quickly move to alfalfa rather than staying with clover or out hay, alfalfa will run about 18% protein compared with 15% for clover on a dry basis.

Speech Center Plans Campaign

Youth and adults of Appomattox county with speech and hearing difficulties are among those who may be benefitted by the launching of a $80,000 campaign by the Central Virginia Speech and Hearing Center.

The Central Virginia Speech and Hearing Center Saturday announced the campaign to launch the operation of a clinic to test, diagnose and treat disorders of hearing and speech in children and adults.

The new center will serve the counties of Amherst, Appomattox, Bedford and Campbell in addition to the cities of Lynchburg and Bedford. O. B. Newton, III, Lynchburg insurance executive will head the drive in which individuals, foundations and industries will be asked to contribute funds to purchase equipment and the employment of three clinicians.

A workshop was held Monday in Lynchburg featuring nationally known speech and hearing officials and a director of clinics similar to that envisioned for this area.

Dr. J. A. Mathews, of Appomattox, is serving on the board of directors of the proposed center.

Singers Use Light Display

The Virginia Tech Varsity Glee Club, scheduled for an appearance in the Appomattox County High School Gymnasium Saturday evening, April 4, will display its music with more than $8,000 in sound and lighting equipment to help package the performance.

An innovator in the field of electronic augmentation for collegiate choral music, Stan Kingma, director of choral music at the University, will draw upon his unusual background of engineering and musical training when presenting the production.

The chorus will subtly amplified with a quality of equipment that will leave even the purist comfortable and unaware of its presence. All concerts are taped for instructional uses and possible record ing releases.

Lighting effects will be coordinated with the music. The singers carry spotlights with them when performing, and use these in conjunction with the existing theater dimmer board when necessary. During the next few years, the group hopes to become entirely self-supporting with its lighting equipment but this will require the purchase of a portable dimmer board, and a semi-trailer in which to haul all the equipment.

The proof of all this work is in the listening. Saturday evening, April 4, at 8:00 p.m. in the Appomattox County High School Gym will find the singers busily entertaining and using this equipment.

Working as Mr. Kingma's assistant is Eugene Lawson, Jr., from Richmond who serves as the technical director for each Glee Club show.

Six contracts totaling $870,937 have been approved for award by the State Highway Commission for the permanent restoration of facilities destroyed in the flooding caused by Hurricane Camille last August.
